Qualogy 2002 Ltd has been operating a successful Good Clinical Laboratory Practice (GCLP) Accreditation scheme for laboratories that assay samples from clinical trials. This scheme has been operating for over twenty (20) years and has over one hundred (100) laboratories subscribing to the GCLP Accreditation scheme worldwide.

As the number of scheme members has grown over time coupled with my approaching retirement, so the need to identify an organisation that can support the scheme and develop its scope and membership moving forward.

Over the past two (2) years Qualogy 2002 has been working closely with Pharmalys Ltd, a UK-based contract research organisation (CRO) that offers a range of clinical trials services, with the objective of moving the GCLP Accreditation scheme into their management and operation.

Working closely with Jeanette Young, who has been appointed by Pharmalys to operate and run the scheme, I am now confident that she has the appropriate knowledge and experience of the scheme to ensure its continued successfully operation.

Over the past two (2) years I have worked closely with Jeanette and provided oversight and supervision of the schemes operation and the work performed by Pharmalys in the conduct and accreditation assessments of laboratories.

Following this period of collaboration and working closely together, I am now confident that both Jeannette and Pharmalys have the knowledge, competence and experience to take overall responsibility of the GCLP Accreditation Scheme and its continued operation.
